Hello,
The college terrace library has been a foundation of our life in college terrace, bringing up our children and even now. We are aware of the budget cuts and the huge economic hardship in these times. We would love to be part of the solution to help figure out how to keep the library open.

Dear Council Members,

I know you are faced with making very tough budget cut decisions. Please keep funding for our fire department. It makes more sense to me to adjust funding for any activity which requires public gatherings--May Fete Parade, Chili Cook-Off, library hours etc.--before cutting funding for first responders. Especially now. It's all gut-wrenching, I know. I have very personal reasons for making this request. I have seen first hand how our firefighters and paramedics can affect a family for the better, and I have friends and loved ones who are firefighters in and around Palo Alto. I know how hard they work and how much they sacrifice for our community.

Thank you for your time and attention to this matter.

Sincerely,
Stefania Pomponi

They not only put out fires but rescue people and are there when there is an emergency health call. We need our fire department to be well funded.

Dear Council members – I’m writing to ask you to please not cut Palo Alto fire department funding at this time. There are other gathering oriented things being funded in our city that because of our unpredictable future do not make sense to find those in advance of our present day and continue need to have fire department safety at its best during this time. Thank you. Pamela Weiss, Redacted, Palo Alto resident since 1995.

Palo Alto City Council Budget Hearings

May 12, 2020

Dear Council Members;

I wanted to hear staff reports, public comments and your questions and concerns before suggesting how to approach this major and unprecedented problem. The comments, discussions, and public statements were very helpful and informative. As a result I want to make my suggestions on how to address the huge funding shortfall that we are facing.

All of the reductions in service should be for this fiscal year or at most this calendar year, not for 2 years as is proposed.

Cut funding for capital projects before cutting the operating budget. Most capital projects can survive a delay of a few months or a year with little impact, but that is not true when services, programs and staff are cut. Those cuts should be as minimal as possible.

I agree with the public objections to closing College Terrace library, especially for 2 years. The library should be kept open, but it could be closed for 1 or 2 days/week. Operating hour reductions for other branches should be minimal whenever possible. Children’s library should not be closed 3 days/week although closing Rinconada and Children’s 1 or 2 hours earlier is reasonable, but not for a full day.

Reducing contributions to the pension fund is acceptable and should be approved. So should reducing contributions to the reserve funds. Teen and youth service programs should be reduced, not eliminated. The reductions in operating hours at the community centers and Art Center should be shorter days, not closed for a full day and only for months or until the end of this year, not for 2 years. Reducing police patrol positions and fire department fire prevention staffing should be minimal as these are important functions. Funds for police engagement and support and records management should be reduced as little as possible if at all as these also are important functions. Should the Cross-town and Embarcadero shuttles be eliminated or maybe just reduced in service frequency in mid-day? Any staffing level reductions in Planning and Transportation should be minimal as service time responses already are rather slow, and some things like code enforcement have been less than desirable levels for years. Eliminating some but not all the unfilled positions is allowable. Eliminating an Emergency Services staff position is not a good idea as El Grande is coming and responding to emergencies is vital to protect public safety and health.

I agree that the other reductions and eliminations of services are reasonable although not desirable. When the threat of the corona-19 virus ends, probably from a combination of successful stay-in-place requirements and creation of a vaccine, we can return to most if not all of the services that will be stopped or reduced. An unintended benefit of this reduction of activities and services maybe that it identifies activities that did not need the levels of funding or staffing they had in order to still function effectively and provide benefits to the community, in which case the cuts can be retained.

Yours, sincerely,            Bob Moss

I know you have tough choices to make in the next few weeks on the budget. As a former business owner, I have experienced firsthand the difficulty of making budget cuts that have direct impacts on people’s lives. It will be extremely difficult to weigh through the judgment calls on what is vital for our community. I hope you can find room in the budget to continue to support our youth at a time when they are under increasing pressure and so much is being taken away from them.

Many of you know that as a parent and community volunteer I have a long history of working with youth. I was active with Project Safety Net during the 2010-2014 suicide contagion. I worry about our youth and how they are coping during the pandemic. I was concerned to see the staff proposal with a recommendation to cut all teen services. I hope that with other adjustments you can find room to preserve some of the more essential youth services, especially those that are creating connections of peer to peer and adult to youth such as the Palo Alto Youth Council, Teen Advisory Board, and Teen Arts Council. As far as I know, these programs are all continuing via Zoom and other online services. I participated in a Zoom meeting with a panel discussion on vaping run by the Teen Arts Council a few weeks ago and was notified of a virtual open mic sponsored by the Teen Arts Council last week. These interactions are vital to the health of our youth and even more important with school closures.

As to a funding source for these and other essential youth programs, I noticed that the proposal also seems to remove the Bryant Street Garage Fund from funding for youth programs. The revenue stream, 75% of the rental income generated by the current tenant Form Fitness, was dedicated to teen programs in 2001 by a council vote when the teens gave up their downtown teen center in favor of funding for teen activities. In 2017 it was anticipated there would be an accumulated fund of $325,000 and an annual revenue stream of $109,000. I have not been able to locate information on the city website as to how much revenue is currently being generated or where the fund balance stands today. For the history of the Bryant Street Garage Fund including council actions to establish and preserve this fund see this staff report: https://www.cityofpaloalto.org/civicax/filebank/documents/49639

I also serve on the Youth Community Service board and in addition to preserving city programs I hope you can continue the Santa Clara County match program of $50k for the Youth Connectedness Initiative run by Youth Community Service https://youthcommunityservice.org/yci/. This is an evidence-based youth mental health program informed by the Search Institute’s Developmental Relationships. Youth Community Service has continued to meet with youth via Zoom meetings during the shelter in place orders. This is a valuable resource for teens and parents under normal circumstances but even more important now to help teens and parents navigate during the pandemic.

Thank you for your consideration and I would be happy to answer any questions.

Sincerely,

Sally Bemus

Subject: College terrace library

CAUTION: This email originated from outside of the organization. Be cautious of opening attachments and clicking on links.

I write regarding the proposed closing of the College Terrace, Library. Please keep it open.

The library is an integral part of the neighborhood, and provides the only library resource west of the train tracks. Families meet for story time, teens have a safe quiet space for studying or meet ups, and adults have a quiet place to work outside of their home. My family has used it regularly and we love it. I think my son checked out every dinosaur-related book they had multiple times, and we made friends there with other families that we might not have otherwise met. I spent hours there multiple times a week with my son during his preschool years. The librarians were wonderful. The selection of children’s books were wonderful. The toys were wonderful. Storytime was wonderful. If we had had to drive across town or bike across the train tracks for a library experience, we wouldn’t have spent nearly as much time in the library as we did. My teenager regularly went to the College Terrace library for a quiet place to do her homework and also to meet with the younger children she volunteer tutored. I hope to build the same connection to books, learning, and neighbors with my youngest child by continuing to visit the College Terrace Library for years to come.

Local libraries provide invaluable opportunities to kickstart a lifelong love of books and learning, as well as community connections. Now that the College Terrace Market has closed, we need our library to be the focal point and strengthen our community more than ever.

Please continue to support neighborhood libraries and, in particular, the College Terrace Library.

Thank you.

Leah Russin

Hi
I am a 40 year resident of college terrace. Have walked by the library 100s of times. Have been inside quite a few times but not frequently. Of course we would all like it to survive (and thrive) but i can NOT justify the expense of keeping it open. If it costs even 1/2 the budget of a fire/police person then it is NOT a meaningful expenditure of our $$.

I assume you are getting 100s of letters from local residents supporting the library, but your job is to make rational choices, listen to all, but also to discount the squeaky wheels, please. Acknowledge that the less active residents, who are in the majority, may be speaking "lack of support" in their silence. We really dont need 5 libraries in Palo Alto - even the cute one in my neighbourhood.

Warm regards,
Dear Mayor and Council,

This concerns the budget discussions in the light of the pandemic.

I suggest that you think about budget adjustments the way that businesses normally do when confronted with a financial crisis. Many businesses are having these problems right now.

First, you avoid actions that could harm or annoy your customers. You make it clear that you are working to restructure the company to meet customer expectations more efficiently.

Then, you review the obligations, organizational structure, and staffing of the company. Group heads are directed to come up with new plans including staffing and other resource reductions while still meeting group and corporate goals.

The City has been blessed with large resources for many decades. Head counts have increased remarkably while salaries and benefits have increased a lot. Given this, it is difficult to believe that you do not have many redundancies and inefficiencies in what has become a large bureaucracy. The City has too many managers and too large a staff in many areas. The residents know this.

I simply refuse to believe that the list of things you have identified for cuts (for example, the libraries and traffic control team) are the least important things in the City's budget. This list is an insult to the community.

It is time to take a measured and professional approach to the problems we face. The community will support you but is likely not to favor cuts to services that we depend upon and love in order to preserve positions that we don't think we need.

Thanks for listening.

Hello,

My son and I are residents of College Terrace and have frequented this wonderful community treasure for many years. It is a wonderful public resource that should be reopened after the pandemic restrictions have subsided and for all the others who have appreciated it as well.

Dear City Council,

I am writing to voice the importance of this library to our community. It is a treasure, which members of our local community highly value. Since my son was 3 years old, we have visited it regularly, on walks in our neighborhood. We see many happy adults and children there and it is a very special place. We really appreciate having this in our community!

Thank you!

Dear Council Members,

Please add my voice to the myriad of College Terrace (and other) residents who request that the library remain open. The benefits the library provides far outweigh the paltry monetary “savings” which would result. The library is a vital part of College Terrace, and is a resource for every demographic—old or young, rich or poor, part of a family or alone, immigrant or native, healthy or disabled, a place to go for solitude, or community...

Closing the College Terrace Library would be false economy and overall a big step backwards. Please keep it open.

Dear City Council,

I want to express my deep concern about the proposal to close the College Terrace Library.

This jewel of a community resource serves College Terrace and the Stanford community, and has been a source of reading material and programming across generations. My two brothers and I used the library often in our youth, and as a current resident of Olmsted Terrace, my two daughters- aged 9 and 11- have been going to the library since they were infants.

The College Terrace Library is a wonderful resource for the College Terrace and Stanford communities, and its closing would be a tremendous loss for the residents. As we move cautiously out of the shadow of Covid-19 in the coming months, having the library as a community resource will be sorely needed. Please keep this branch open.

Best regards,

Teceta and Zak Tormala
Dear City Council,

I am writing to ask that you please reconsider the plan to close the College Terrace Library. As a College Terrace resident for the past 15 years, I have treasured having the library in the neighborhood. Before the shelter-in-place, I went at least once per week. I love having a library within walking distance to my home. And, judging by the number of people who are in the library whenever I go, other community members do also.

The CT library is the only library branch west of El Camino Real. Having a branch on this side of El Camino Real supports the literacy of children in this part of Palo Alto. My own two daughters, ages 14 and 12, often go to the library by themselves to check out books. Even though the library is small, any book in the Palo Alto collection can be obtained with the hold system. If a library branch must be closed, why not close the Downtown branch, which has similar statistics in terms of items checked out, but is very close to the Rinconada library.

Thank you for your consideration,

Hi,

I work in research park area and am concerned the Palo Alto city council is reducing funding for fire and EMS response. In light of the pandemic and upcoming fire season, it's critical we preserve current resource levels. Please consider cutting other areas and preserving fire and medical response services.

Thank you

Sreenidhi.
Please save this beloved neighborhood library. It is a lovely old building and one of the few remaining icons showing what Palo Alto used to be. My children, now in their 40s and 50s, and I, now 78, spent many, many happy hours there when they were growing up. I would like other children to have the same opportunity.

With the traffic nightmare Palo Alto now endures, it is more important than ever to have libraries within walking distance of users. Even though the on-site collection of this library is smaller than those of the larger ones, users can easily ask the librarians to get something from another library.

The College Terrace Library is a wonderful place. Please don’t give it up.

Dear City Council,

Our family has reviewed the May 7 City Council City Staff report outlining amendments to the proposed FY 2021 budget, and we urge the Council to reject the proposal to close the College Terrace Library.

The College Terrace Library is a true gem, and as the City’s only community center located west of El Camino Real, it is a vital resource for residents on this side of the city. The College Terrace Library is a central hub for civic life in College Terrace, and the neighborhood would not be the same without it. This library branch played a large role in our decision to pick the College Terrace neighborhood over others as our place to live and raise a family.

Our family lives on Wellesley Street, and we use the College Terrace Library two to three times per week. We often walk in to browse the library’s selection of books and movies, and love running into other community-members there. Our elementary-school aged daughter loves to use the reading room to read or do homework, especially on hot summer-days. She also meets her neighborhood friends there. The College Terrace Library Lucky-Day Shelf is the best in the city, allowing residents to quickly access new and sought-after titles. We also rely heavily on the hold-shelf at this branch to access titles from the entire city library catalog, without having to drive to other branches. Lastly, we love to see little ones flock to the College Terrace Library branch for story time on Tuesday afternoons.

As our community begins to slowly emerge from the isolation of shelter-in-place, we will need more places to gather and reconnect, not fewer. It would be incredibly heartbreaking to lose our beloved College Terrace Library at the very time when we need it the most. We implore you to keep the College Terrace Library open and explore other avenues for cost-saving.

Sincerely,

Meghan Moura

Dear city council members,

I am writing to urge you not to close the College Terrace branch of the city library. From Ventura Avenue to Churchill and from Alma Street on west, this is the closest library branch for hundreds of families. It is not only the most convenient branch for us, but for non-drivers it is the only library branch many of can easily access. It’s the only one on a quiet neighborhood location. Please look to other cuts rather than taking the modest budget of this valuable resource.

Regards,
Susan Cole

Dear City Council,

My name is Michele Wang and I have been a resident of Palo Alto since 2000. I love living in this community and have raised my 2 children here. As you look at program cuts over the next few weeks, I wanted to let you know how much our family has treasured the Palo Alto Children’s Theatre. Our daughter has been acting in plays there since 2013. It’s an amazing resource for children interested in performing arts. It has not only provided her with a great, rich learning environment, but also a home away from home. She met her best friends there and often goes there to pop in to say “Hi” to Judge Luckey, Patricia Montenegro or Marieke Gaboury. All wonderful and inspiring adult influences in her life.

There seems to be a lot of sports opportunities around Palo Alto, but few places for kids that have different interests. I appreciate that Palo Alto provides a breadth of activities to engage our youth.

Thank you for continuing to support the Palo Alto Children’s Theatre.

Warmly,

Hi,

My family has lived in College Terrace for over 50 years. My three brothers and I grew up going to the library. It has been a huge part of our lives. I still live in CT and I use the library all the time. I read there. I do work on the computer there. I check out books, dvds and sometimes other materials. I get to see and catch up with neighbors and friends. It is my HOME.

The College Terrace Library is a very valuable to our community. It is a meeting place for families, friends and neighbors. It is an important refuge for our elders. It provides shelter to those experiencing homelessness.

To whom it may concern,

I learned this week about a potential plan to close our beloved College Terrace library, and wanted to express my concern and opposition. As a 15+ year resident of College Terrace I have used this library almost once a week, and my middle- and elementary-school age children are now able to walk there and pick up books independently. This library is a great asset for our neighborhood, but it is also the most accessible for a number of residents living between Embarcadero and Loma Verde, and it would be a shame to see it closed.

I hope and trust you will reconsider this plan.

Best,
Geraldine
Dear City Council Members,

Please reject the proposal to close the College Terrace Library. It is a wonderful library branch, truly a hidden gem, that is enjoyed, used and needed by many. When I first moved to College Terrace in 2004, I worked in the CT Library, and I was able to see and appreciate how necessary the branch was. Now, as a parent, I have seen how important the library is to my children. When they were young, they loved to visit the library and pick out their own books. When they were old enough to make the bike ride to the Library on their own, the independence they gained from the experience filled them (and me) with pride. It is a safe place they can go, if they need to. To build strong communities and raise our kids to be independent, we need places they can go to, like the CT library. Please keep the College Terrace Library open!

I'm a new resident of College Terrace (as of Oct 2019) and was devastated to hear about the proposal to close the College Terrace library. Before the shelter in place order, I visited the library weekly to check out books. One of my first fond memories after moving to College Terrace was the friendly staff members' help in obtaining a library card and teaching me how to request and check out books. The library is a true bright spot in the neighborhood that encourages residents to unplug and reconnect with literature and each other - sorely needed in the heart of Silicon Valley. Dear City Council members,

Thank you for tackling the very difficult budget decisions the City of Palo Alto is facing. I am a 13-year resident of College Terrace and can attest to the fact that the library is a center for our community. It serves a diverse and close knit community, serving families, young professionals and older people. It is easily reached by bike or by walking for a wide variety of residents. In this time of increasing alienation and fractured community, the college terrace library is a treasure that is irreplaceable. Even a short-term closure until revenues come back would be better than taking away this library.

Please also consider the private support from Friends of the Library and others that you will like get for the library and other Palo Alto services.

Thank you,

When we moved to here over 20 yrs ago, it welcomed me — small, multipurpose, friendly. Even had a few places to sit and read and greet people! I know it’s changed since then, but there is NO other library available to serve this west part of PA.!
Please consider keeping it in a multi-use form.

Dear Palo Alto City Council,

My name is Sue Chan, I'm a newly minted board member of the Palo Alto Art Center, and a Menlo Park resident.

While I am very aware that it is a reality that we are in completely abnormal times where budget cuts are necessary and the responsible decision, I wanted to make a personal and impassioned plea on behalf of the Palo Alto Art Center.

The Art Center has inspired my daughter Sevi (6) to find her voice via art. She is a brave but sensitive child, and comes across loudest when she is expressing herself in a space where there are no rules, there is no wrong, there are no limits - - and she found this at the Art Center. We were blessed to enroll her in after school classes, 2 summer camps, Secret Saturdays, Family Days -- and this was all before I became a board member. It is an incredible resource to the community, and part of why I joined the board was because I saw the very simple and real magic there.

I believe in the Art Center's mission unequivocally and know that it has become the center of creativity for Palo Alto-- and I truly hope the city of Palo Alto sees how deeply it is valued. As a board, we are prepared to increase our budget to ensure the Art Center programs remain supported. We have a board that is dedicated to this cause and will drive campaign and donor contributions, as evidenced from our recent Spring Campaign results.

Ending the Art Center as a service will come at the expense of the fabric of the community, its children and neighboring residents (like myself) and are a reason that Palo Alto itself stands apart with its resources and dedication as a beacon in the Bay Area. Parents participating in Summer Camp focus groups also indicated strong interest in sending their children back into learning and enriching environments at the Art Center for the summer -- including myself. The reach is wide -- with the Art Center serving over 150,000 between July 2018-June 2019.

Thank you for taking my comments.

Dear Members of the City Council,

We are writing to express our dismay at the prospect of closing the College Terrace Library. It is a vital source of books, media, community info as well as a cozy neighborhood gathering place that serves thousands of residents. The College Terrace library allows many of us to visit a library without going across El Camino Real and through downtown. Without this location, we will not be using the library nearly as much. It is bad enough that this library is only open several days a week, but to close it all together would be too much of a loss to the Palo Alto community on the west side of town. The amount saved in its closure would make little difference in the overall city budget.

Thank you for reconsidering this proposal.

Respectfully,

Carol and Ron Ruth
Dear members of the city council:

If there has been one silver lining from the current pandemic, it is that we see so many more of our neighbors walking and biking on our street. Considering severe budget cuts are currently needed, we would like to encourage you to continue to invest in cycling and walking in Palo Alto. Fortunately, pedestrian and cycling infrastructure can be very cheap compared to other modes of transport. Traffic diversions are a cheap way to build a bike boulevard, and one parking spot for a car can easily fit 10 bikes. Below are a number of suggestions that we feel would help in the current situation.

- We think the shared streets program is a great initiative and very much enjoy walking on Ross Road. This could be extended to University Avenue and California Avenue, once restaurants are allowed to open again. This way they can place seating outside at a safe distance. Having more diners would increase the tax income of the city.
- Because the capacity of public transport is greatly reduced due to social distancing, many cities all over the world have installed (temporary) bike lanes. This would be a great time to install temporary bike lanes on el camino for people who are currently not comfortable riding on Caltrain, and allow people to go to work.
- Lastly, considering the budgets cuts, we think it is a good time to stop spending money on the downtown parking garage, and completely cancel this project. Considering the economic downturn, this extra capacity won't be needed and would be a waste of precious resources.

Thank you for your work in these difficult circumstances.

Kind regards,

Nicole, Arnout, and Ava Zoeller Boelens
Dear City Council members,

I remember some years back when the economy tanked and the City wanted to close College Terrace Library. Supporters like myself objected strongly and the City eventually just closed it on Mondays and Thursdays. Why is College Terrace Library, the city resource my family and I use above all others, always the first target of budget cutting?

As I said in the questionnaire you sent out to get citizen input, please find another way to save money. One place to start is the huge salaries enjoyed by top administrators, and there is usually a lot of bloat and inefficiency in operations that should be pursued before you take away the things that make this city so great.

Thanks.

Please keep the college terrace library. I have stage 4 non small cell lung cancer. Due to my medication I have made the decision not to drive. This is for the safety of myself and other drivers on the road. College Terrace is the only library I have the ability to walk to. My cancer is being controlled by medication, but there is no cure. I have no idea how long before my cancer mutates and I will have to switch drugs. I am on drug number 4 between immune suppression, chemo and targeted therapy. Currently I understand I have 3 potential drugs to try before I have palliative care. Having a library I can walk to is a blessing. I don't know how many seniors and how many with young children that it serves besides high school students, but I know it is a blessing for me.

Dear City Council,

Undoubtedly we are facing challenging financial decisions for all our city and its residents. A few weeks ago I wrote to the Council regarding the discussion of street closures. My concern at that time and again today was not about spending our resources on street closures but maintaining a focus on safety. Speeding, traffic, distracted drivers are present in our city and put all of us but especially our school age children at greatest risk. Biking in Palo Alto is one of our blessings, but doing it safely can be very hard.

In making cuts, please protect public safety, and in particular, the safety of our children as they travel to our neighborhood schools, crossing major city thoroughfares as well as on streets usually highly transited by workers entering Palo Alto each day.

1. Safe Routes to Schools (SRTS)
The SRTS staff are critical to ensure our children’s safety. Dedicated PTA volunteers help support this committee, but are only a piece of its success. The SRTS staff is an important consistent piece of this partnership having knowledge of the administration and historical knowledge of this group. This Committee is the best example of a City/School/Community partnership I have seen in Palo Alto.

2. Crossing Guards
The $500,000 annual crossing guard is modest and is invaluable for providing student safety. The lack of traffic police staff in recent years and the increase of traffic into Palo Alto makes many of the major thoroughfares unsafe for cyclists. Without the guards crossing El Camino, Middlefield and Embarcadero would be extremely hazardous for students during the morning rush hour and after school.

Clearly there are many hard decisions to make for the health and welfare of our citizens. I hope you will be thoughtful to making sure we keep our students safe.

Thanks,
Elizabeth May
Presentation on May 12 during Oral Communications on behalf of Palo Alto Museum:

- I’m Hal Mickelson, a resident of the Greenmeadow neighborhood. I’m speaking today on behalf of the Palo Alto History Museum.
- I have good news on two points relating to rehabilitation of the Roth Building. I’ll explain why it’s good news.
- My objective is to ask you to put this matter in what you figuratively call “the parking lot” for discussion at the appropriate time.
- It’s good news because it relates to potential ways of meeting the urgent need to rescue and stabilize the Roth Building at a smaller cost than you might expect and with no impact on general funds that can be used for other purposes.
- First point: We’ve talked with Vance Brown, the construction company that would handle rehabilitation of the Roth Building, and they’re telling us it may be possible to break the project down into phases that would cost less money initially and push other expenses out into the future. The initial phase of construction would stabilize the building and create what the builders call either a “cold shell” or a “warm shell” as a base for future work when more funds are available.
- Second point: Please look at the e-mail message that most of you received Sunday and yesterday from the Museum’s president, Rich Green. If you don’t have a copy, Rich also sent it to the City Manager. Please look at the attachments. There are “impact fee” funds that can be used to stabilize the Roth Building without drawing on general funds that surely are needed for other purposes. Specifically, there are unexpended Library Impact Fees of $1.15M that can be used for a Palo Alto Museum at the Roth Building because the Museum would house the City Archives. Of the total Library Impact Fee amount, $940,00 would relate to the square footage needed for the Archives. There are also Park...
Impact Fees that could fund $350,000 worth of construction because the Museum would provide a public restroom for adjoining park facilities. In addition, there are Community Center Impact Fees that might be available because the Museum will have a community meeting room and serve in other ways as a gathering place.

- Again, you can find details in Rich Green’s letter; the City Manager has a copy. The issue for today is “parking” the matter for future discussion.

Councilmember Tanaka stated just now that this budget cycle requires discipline, as we are living in unprecedented times.

I would urge the City Council to not be swayed by any particular constituency about a budget line item which is being discussed. You are looking at the budget as a whole, please be disciplined in your approach.

I do not mean to suggest that you should ignore input from residents, but simply that you not be overly swayed by any particular group.

thank you for your service,

I was not able to make public comment regarding Capital Budget use of funds (could not call the designated number in time)

I typically speak in favor of bicycle infrastructure, so this proposal will be a departure: can PL-14000 Churchill Avenue Enhanced Bikeway be deferred from the FY21 capital budget and the transfer from the general fund be reduced accordingly?

I hasten to add that I am unfamiliar on the linkages between the operating budget and the Capital Improvement Fund, so this question may be unfitting.

I do not believe that the PL-14000 Churchill Avenue Enhanced Bikeway project should be considered “essential”

thanks for your consideration

As the City Council plots a course for the future and a gradual ending of the Shelter-in-Place orders, there are issues which I believe should be addressed.

As businesses resume operation, it is important that the City resume enforcement of parking permits and time limits in the areas covered by Residential Parking Permit programs. These neighborhoods are not free or overflow commercial parking areas.

The Sherman Avenue garage is the first major improvement in parking in the California Avenue area in decades, adding a significant number of spaces. When the garage is opened, the number of non-resident parking permits in the Evergreen Park/Mayfield RPP area should be reduced. I recommend a reduction of 50% when existing permits expire, followed by an additional 10% reduction each subsequent year. This will benefit the residential neighborhoods and insure that the garage is fully utilized.

Establish parking permit pricing for the Sherman Avenue garage which incentivizes its usage. Prices for non-resident permits in adjacent RPP neighborhoods should be significantly higher than garage permits.

Commercial parking permits in the RPP areas should be reserved for neighborhood-serving business, especially those distant from parking garages and lots. Non-resident parking permits should be allocated on a need basis, not on a first-come first-served basis.

Employee parking permits should be allocated to businesses, not individual employees, which will allow the permits to be transferred when an employee leaves or shared between part-time employees. This reduces the number of employee permits needed.

Many properties have inadequate parking, obtained by paying in lieu fees. These one-time fees do not adequately cover the ongoing costs of inadequate parking and should be increased or replaced with an annual fee which can be adjusted based on current costs.

Other properties have inadequate parking, obtained by the creation of Traffic Demand Management programs. The City should maintain records of each TDM and require each property with a TDM to submit an annual certification that the plan is being followed and that it is effective. Penalties should be assessed against properties which have TDMs which are not being followed or which are ineffective.

Traffic Demand Management programs and Residential Parking Permit programs are two orthogonal methods of addressing inadequate parking in the City. If a property is covered by a TDM, occupants should not be eligible for RPP permits. Allowing occupants in a property with a TDM to purchase RPP permits undermines the intent of the TDM and increases the burden on neighborhood parking.

As the City Council faces significant budget issues with the prospect of staff reductions, there is an opportunity to improve efficiency and preserve the quality of life in Palo Alto.

PAUSD Board and Palo Alto City Council,

In this challenging climate, as you face the reality of making decisions about cutting programs, please keep the mental health and wellbeing of children as paramount importance. The isolation, the drain of virtual living and the depressing prognosis is tremendously challenging for an adult, but I am finding it is overwhelming to my children. And once overwhelmed, the struggle to engage and continue participating is even greater hurdle.

Our children are flexible and being incredibly resilient. They are being asked to adapt and evolve with haste. Do not discount the need to support this change and give them the space to recover.

As the District and the City are often partners on many programs for youth, please make these decisions together and continue to support, where possible, the existing organizations that have demonstrated they can help our children.

Thanks,
Elizabeth May
As you know I'm a huge advocate for our PSB & New Fire Station Building. However, losing the sworn officers is very expensive and painful and the current plan would cut 14 sworn officers. A 6 month or 1 year delay of either of the PBS or Fire Station Building projects would be ok if it resulted in not firing sworn officers. I checked with Chief Jonsen on his take before advocating for this and his preference was bodies over buildings. Note, I'm part of the Chief's Citizen Advisory Group. Also, I personally would rather see the firestation delayed a year (since we just completed one) and a temporary delay in bike infrastructure construction. I'm just sharing my opinion and there are a lot of moving parts but do consider this.

Also, note the Newell Bridge Replacement for Flood Control & Pedestrian/Bike access is 100% paid for by CalTrans & SCWVD so the savings would only be some staff project management so its a much higher benefit vs cost.

Lastly, Brad Eggleston is doing a great job delivering infrastructure projects and I've been very impressed with his successful completion of the Newell Firestation, progress on Cal Ave Garage and PSB design so I do think we want to continue to move forward with these projects as fast as possible while not cutting sworn officers that have already been hired. It's with reluctance and only due to the dire circumstances that I advocate for a short delay on the infrastructure projects not started.

Dear Mayor Fine, Vice-Mayor DuBois, and members of the City Council,

In this very difficult budgeting context, Canopy wishes to:

1. Express support for the proposed adjustments to the Public Works Urban Forestry tree pruning budget.

2. Request a firm commitment that Urban Forestry programs will be fully funded at the first opportunity, to ensure the return to optimal tree-pruning cycles and the resumption of other Urban Forest Master Plan projects.

Since the adoption of the Urban Forest Master Plan in 2015, and thanks to the support of the Council and community advocates, the Palo Alto urban forest is in very good shape. Inventory and performance records indicate that the forest has largely recovered from losses caused by the prolonged drought. In the last few years, the actual pruning cycle has been shorter than the 7-year target. On average, the return frequency has been about 6 years.
In an effort to contribute to the budgetary efforts the situation demands from all, we support the City staff’s proposal to save money by decreasing the street tree pruning contract temporarily (two years). Although delay is not preferred, trees are generally resilient. The resulting pruning cycle is estimated to lengthen by one year.

As you all understand and appreciate, the Palo Alto urban forest plays a crucial role in achieving the City’s public health, sustainability, and economic vitality goals. Trees are Palo Alto’s greatest natural resource and prominent, much-loved features of the city’s natural and urban environments. This is why you adopted the City’s ambitious Urban Forest Master Plan and its 2019 revision.

It is imperative that the Council make a firm commitment to fully fund Urban Forestry programs. To date, implementation of the Urban Forest Master Plan has been severely underfunded. Unlike many other programs, tree care, planting, and other projects can be safely conducted during the current public health emergency.

We are fortunate that the City’s Urban Forester and his staff are dedicated, eminently skilled, and creative professionals and that Canopy is in a position to assist the City, especially to achieve tree planting goals in a safe manner. Palo Alto’s urban forest, however, cannot be taken for granted. Without robust funding for tree maintenance and other projects, the forest will deteriorate and not deliver the ecosystem services we depend on, especially to combat and mitigate climate change.

Thank you for all the careful attention you are giving to this budget. In the words of Councilmember Cormack, it is truly a heart breaking process.

dear Palo Alto Council,

I’d urge you to keep this branch of the public library open. It’s an important resource for College Terrace and the surrounding neighborhoods. I have lived on the Stanford campus since 1970, and I go to that library at least once a week: it’s been invaluable, including when my son was small. We got innumerable books out for him to read and have read. Please find a way to keep this local library open.

Yours sincerely,

Dear City Council,

With sadness I learned of the Staff recommendation to close the College Terrace Library.

The College Terrace Library is in the heart of College Terrace and is the focal point for our community.

Families meet for the story hour, students come in to study, neighbors gather for a chat to catch up and all are checking out books.

Our Library is much loved and very much needed here in College Terrace. It will again be the soul of the neighborhood as we emerge from isolation.

Please keep our Library open, it is the one focal point we have left.

Sincerely,
Melanie Grondel
Palo Alto, Ca
Dear City Council folks -

I live in college Terrace and make extensive use of the library. I'm old enough I would probably survive without getting more books from the library. The same can not be said for many of the users who's young minds need the exposure to the wealth of information the books contain.

A library is more than just book too - there are other media (CD's, DVD's, BlueRay's) of course but also less tangible elements like "community", "quietness", "variety" that make for a richer experience that benefits everyone.

I understand there is a budget issue making you consider the closing, but the eventual of closing it will probably be much higher than any money you might save in the short term.

Please find some other way to get us past this fiscal shortfall.

Hello Beth,

Thank you for your guidance earlier today.

Attached you will find a packet of 30 letters in support of the Palo Alto Museum for the City Council's consideration.

Warm regards,

Dear Mayor Fine and Members of the Palo Alto City Council,

I am writing to present 30 letters we have just received from long time Palo Alto residents and community leaders who have manifested their unwavering support towards the Palo Alto Museum. Reading through these letters will reinforce the deep ties of our community with this long overdue unmet need and the desire to have a world-class museum that can perpetuate the many historical achievements of our amazing city.

Here are some of the supporters who have written to us:

Steve Smith, Chairman, Computer History Museum
Roxy Rapp, Long time Palo Alto businessman
Dr. Laura Jones, Director of Heritage Services, Stanford University
Annette Fazzino
Georgie Gleim, PAHA Board and President, Gleim the Jeweler
Colleen Thoits Braff, PAHA Board of Directors
Ralph Britton, Former President, PAHA
Steve and Nancy Player, Museum Advisory Board
Gail Woolley, Former Mayor

We understand this is a very challenging period. During times like this, we all need to come together as a community. We are speaking with one voice to ask the City to embrace the Roth Building and the Museum with the priority and support they deserve.

Sincerely,

Richard C. Green

Dear Mayor and Members of the Palo Alto City Council:

I am writing today to urge you to continue supporting the Palo Alto Museum’s use of the Roth Building and to consider additional funding for the rehabilitation project.

I’ve been honored to serve as President of the Palo Alto Museum since 2013 and have learned just how deep and passionate support for this Museum is. The community resolutely wants to see this project fulfilled.

Surprisingly few people truly understand the importance of Palo Alto’s history in the local context and, indeed, on the world stage. In many respects, the people of Palo Alto have invented the modern world. Telling those stories for the benefit of future generations is our inspired goal and our solemn responsibility.

The Roth Building is itself historic and worthy of patient and thorough preservation. In partnership with the City of Palo Alto, the Museum will achieve that goal now and for many decades ahead. Our Board, professional staff and army of volunteers have pledged themselves to making a world-class history museum in the Roth Building a reality. We’ve taken this pledge as far as we can. The next step is unconditional support from the building’s owner, the City of Palo Alto.

I urge you to join me and thousands of friends and neighbors in supporting our community’s advancement, goodwill, culture, and pride through the Palo Alto Museum.

Sincerely,

Dear Mayor Fine, Liz Kniss, and other Members of the Palo Alto City Council:

I am writing to you today to urge you to continue supporting the development of the Palo Alto Museum and its use of the Roth Building.

In my role as Chairman of the board at the Computer History Museum, I have a passion for the importance of collecting, interpreting and presenting the stories of important history, especially in areas that are continuing to evolve. And if those living in these important historical moments don’t act, the opportunities can be lost forever.

Palo Alto is the “stem cell” of Silicon Valley, which has been home base for the most important evolution in the history of mankind: the technology industry. The Palo Alto stories of innovation and entrepreneurship that have led to valuable advances for the benefit of humanity are inspirational. The time to develop a world class museum for Palo Alto is now. And if we don’t create an institution to present these Palo Alto stories, who will?

My wife Paula and I are long-time residents of Palo Alto and we have been supporters of many significant additions to our wonderful community. I have met with the board of the Palo Alto Museum and they impress me as thoughtful and passionate leaders for this effort. Therefore, the development of the museum and its use of the historic Roth Building are another project we eagerly support.

Obviously, you have a multitude of challenges and opportunities that compete for your attention. Hopefully the City Council can give the Palo Alto Museum the priority and support it deserves.

Sincerely,

Dear Mayor and Members of the Palo Alto City Council:

I am writing in the hope that the Council will move ahead to support placing our local history museum in the historic Roth building.

Palo Alto has changed dramatically since I arrived here in 1947 at age eight. The story of its history, from early exploration to a few houses in Stanford’s wheat fields, to a small college town, the postwar boom, and today’s thriving city, should be accessible beyond a textbook—in a visual and auditory exhibit that will attract, educate, and entertain not only young people, newcomers, and visitors, but long-time Palo Alto residents like myself, who can enjoy reliving memories now shared with younger generations.

Palo Alto has a unique innovative and cultural history that has impacted not just the city but the nation and the world. To make that record available to young and old, not only in multisensory form, but in a place like the Roth building, itself an icon of old Palo Alto, would seem a high priority, one I hope the council will see fit to encourage and support.

Sincerely,

Subject: Palo Alto Museum

I’d like to express my firm support for the Palo Alto Museum project at the Roth Building. Local archives and museums play essential roles in our communities and are the bedrock upon which the understanding and practice of history making depends. I believe strongly that connecting to local history creates commitment to building strong communities. The Palo Alto Museum will be an essential hub for community building in a time of uncertainty when we need anchors, stories, and inspiration.

I have been a supporter of the Palo Alto Museum project since the beginning. I live in Palo Alto and work at Stanford University. It saddens me that neither Palo Alto nor Stanford have a permanent place for our histories to be shared – for schoolchildren, and new residents, and visitors to be welcomed and to learn about this special place and for longtime residents to share their stories and celebrate our achievements. I’m sure you know how much Palo Altans love our libraries and community centers – we have the potential to score a huge win at the Roth building with a unique community program in an important and unique historic building. The Roth Building is worth saving in any case but so much more effectively if it can host a community use rather than be taken over by offices or uses that can’t fully represent its place in the heart of our city.

As a member of the team that managed Stanford’s Loma Prieta earthquake recovery I can testify that it can take decades to rescue these important historic buildings. Our Old Chemistry building was closed for 30 years (1987-2017) before being reborn as the Sapp Center for Science Teaching and Learning. Peter Coutt’s historic library, Tower House, was closed for 20 years before we found the right combination of program and funding to bring it back to life. It requires patience, commitment, creativity and persistence to see these projects to successful completion.

The Palo Alto Museum is the best program fit for the historic Roth Building: respectful, community-centered, outward facing. The Palo Alto Museum’s team has demonstrated that it can get this done – slowly, but steadily, carefully, and with great heart. Please respect the years of commitment demonstrated by the friends of this project and offer your continuing support.

Respectfully,

Laura Jones
To the Honorable City Council

I am on the board of the Palo Alto Historical Association. I am also both a long-time business owner and resident of Palo Alto. As such, I appreciate Palo Alto’s unique history, both local and global, and the importance of having a place to share and preserve that history for the education and enjoyment of future generations.

I would like to urge you to reconsider soliciting an additional RFP for uses of the city-owned Roth Building other than a Palo Alto History Museum. As the historic birthplace of Silicon Valley, Palo Alto deserves a museum to serve as a place to preserve, document, and share our contributions to the area in areas far broader than the existing area museums. Plans and permits are ready, as are staffing plans, exhibit plans, collections and the city archives. The current plan includes space-sharing with the city in that it will house the city archives and provide a community room for events. Requesting additional RfPs at this date makes it much more difficult for the museum supporters to raise the additional funds needed to begin.

The museum is ready to begin construction. The longer it is put off, the more expensive it becomes as the structure needs reinforcing and preservation. It is a shame that we could end up being the only city in the area without a worthy history museum when we have the perfect location and a dedicated board who has been working for a long time to make it happen. It would also be a shame to allow a building significant to the city’s history to fall into complete disrepair.

Please continue to support the Museum; we are so very nearly there!

Thank you for your time.

Dear Mayor and Members of the Palo Alto City Council,

I am writing to you today to urge you to continue supporting the Palo Alto Museum’s use of the Roth Building.

As a 4th generation of a pioneer family in Palo Alto I strongly believe the Palo Alto Museum is a vital asset to our city. My great-great grandfather, E.K. Thoits came to Palo Alto in 1893 for the educational opportunity for his two sons at the newly opened Stanford University. His younger son, E.C. Thoits was a City Councillman for more than 40 years including two terms as mayor and with the help of his foresight and guidance, Palo Alto grew from a handful of houses to a small city. E.C., also had a deep interest in local history and was a director and life member of the Palo Alto Historical Association. Growing up in Palo Alto has given me an appreciation and passionate for our town’s rich history, whose innovation and leadership has changed the world! As a director of the Palo Alto Historical Association myself, I, too, have seen, heard, touched and helped archive history that shouldn’t sit idly shelved collecting dust. These should be showcased to inspire present and future generations. I enthusiastically support the Roth Building as the ideal home for the Palo Alto Museum and the PAHA Archive Collection.

If the city steps up its commitment like it has done recently for the Junior Museum and Zoo our citizens would be able to reap the community benefits the Palo Alto Museum would provide. Our city is at the heart of Silicon Valley and we have a legacy that extends around the globe. I urge you to stay the course and help make the Palo Alto Museum in the renovated Roth Building a reality so that we can showcase the impact our citizens have made and inspire our current and future generations to come.

Sincerely,

Colleen Thoits Braff

Dear Mayor Fine and Council Members Cormack, DuBois, Filseth, Kniss, Kou, and Tanaka:

I am writing to you today to encourage you to continue to support the Palo Alto Museum's use of the Roth Building.

I have a heartfelt personal interest in the museum. As you know, my late husband, Gary Fazzino (Two time former Mayor and longtime member of the City Council) was an ardent supporter of this project. He contributed his leadership and passion for the project and we contributed together financially, as well. I continue to support the museum in this way, in his memory and for the benefit of our children. Gary and I always felt that understanding history makes us better. History inspires the present and the future. We learn what makes our community special and what brings us all together. This project remains close to my heart and the hearts of my children.

Palo Alto's history is rich and diverse. For a city of merely +/-65,000 people, our hometown is known throughout the world. And, why? It's because of our innovative and creative roots and lasting worldwide leadership. From Stanford University to launching Silicon Valley, Palo Alto is a mecca for many. People want to visit, to live, and to be inspired here. If our stories are not preserved, they will die quietly and anonymously. We need to share with our citizens, children, and visitors all of the wonderful things that have happened here. By sharing our history, we build our community and share the path for the next generation to continue to be leaders and innovators.

The Roth Building is the perfect place to share our history. It's surrounded by Heritage Park and the building itself is historic. Please support the Palo Alto Museum and its use and preservation of the historic Roth Building. Let the Palo Alto Museum's presence in its rightful place in the Roth Building be a light and beacon to the community. Let it inspire, nurture, and educate our youth, citizens, and visitors. Doing so will build community, goodwill, culture, and pride in Palo Alto.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Dear Liz,

I have been informed that the City Council has become concerned, or perhaps remained concerned about the slow pace of fund raising for the Palo Alto History Museum.

I retired as the Palo Alto Historical Association President when I moved to a retirement community in San Diego. But almost 85 years living in Palo Alto have given me a historical interest and perspective. I think that the History Museum is potentially one of the threads that can weave a tapestry that will inform present and future citizens of the events and efforts that have created the city as it now stands.

We know that a city is more than just buildings and related infrastructure—it’s the soul of the place which is the sum of all that dedicated citizens have given to it for over 100 years. Sadly our newest and wealthiest citizens have not shown sufficient interest in local history to provide the share of funding that they could have so easily. Perhaps that will change as the project progresses toward reality.

From a practical standpoint one can ask what is to become of a historic building, owned by the city and located in part of a city park? Dedication and hard work have created plans and considerable funds raised by relatively small donations to move thus far forward on the History Museum. If it’s not going to sit idle for years into the future, something must be done now to augment and realize the project.

The City has, through philanthropy and civic commitment, created a formidable array of cultural and recreational venues which have made the city much more than simply a dot on a map. It’s appropriate for the City Council to fund a major part of the remaining cost in order for this educational and cultural asset to become reality, as it has for other public facilities such as the Junior Museum.

Respectfully yours,

Ralph Britton
Re: Palo Alto Museum

Dear Mayor Fine and Members of the City Council:

As a former Board Member and present member of the Advisory Board of the Palo Alto Museum, I am writing to urge your ongoing support of the use of the Roth Building for the home of the Museum.

Palo Alto is a unique community with a story that deserves to be told. I have lived and worked in Palo Alto for over 50 years, and have had the opportunity to meet personally many of the outstanding individuals who have made Palo Alto what it is today. Unfortunately, we do not have a place in the City to honor those individuals and tell their stories. The Roth Building provides the ideal place for a museum, and it should be restored for this purpose. The building has a history all its own which will be displayed in the Museum. Dr. Lee and Dr. Clark were leaders in the medical field and created one of the first clinics of its type which has served this community so well. Surrounded by Heritage Park, it will be a landmark drawing people to the museum to learn about the story of Palo Alto.

Many people have chosen to support the Museum effort, both financially and as volunteers, because they believe that Palo Alto needs and deserves a museum. One of the highlights of the museum will be the William Miller Room where visitors can see and hear from his video tapes the stories of the many people he interviewed over the years on community television. Bill believed in creating a living history of the City and felt strongly that these stories should be heard. These voices will be preserved for future Palo Altans in the Museum.

It is important that the City and the Museum continue to work in partnership to make the Roth Building the special home to display the history of this creative, innovative, and wonderful place in which we all live.

I enthusiastically support the Palo Alto Museum, and its use and preservation of the Roth Building. I hope you will join me, and the numerous supporters of this effort, in leaving a legacy for future generations to enjoy and learn about our outstanding City.

Thank you for your support and for your service to Palo Alto.

Very truly yours,

Dear Mayor Fine, Vice Mayor DuBois and Members of the Palo Alto City Council:

I am writing to you today to urge your support for a community project that delivers on many fronts not otherwise available in Palo Alto. The Palo Alto Museum at the Roth Building brings educational, research, archives, exhibits and, frankly, necessary focus that the City must support to show our values. And what better place to locate a Palo Alto Museum than in the Roth Building right there at Heritage Park.

In supporting the Museum, I and so many others recognize that our current times quickly become our history, times that we must record and make available for the learnings that examination provide.

Palo Alto has long been the leader on many fronts. It has nurtured innovation and creativity including on environmental fronts. For decades we have taken initiatives that have helped make our city and this region a continuing leader in providing a mobile, well-educated labor force that has made critical contributions to path-breaking enterprises while at the same time pushing to be a leader in a range of environmental endeavors: Earth Day, curbside recycling, protected open spaces to name a few. It is prudent to make available important documents that describe how our community has supported these innovations. We cannot assume reliance on word of mouth or lore to help forward the tradition that Palo Alto has fostered. We need the Palo Alto Museum to provide assurance.

I enthusiastically support the Palo Alto Museum and the restoration of the historic Roth Building for the Museum.

As an economist and former council member, I understand too well the strain of budget constraints. But I urge you to find the funds to join me, my friends and neighbors in supporting this community’s culture and pride through the Palo Alto Museum at the Roth Building. It is a project ready to go. It is a project whose potential will not be likely otherwise. Let’s go!

Most sincerely,

Greg Schmid
Former Vice Mayor and City Council member
Dear Council Members:

As a former mayor and long-time champion of Palo Alto, I urge you to pursue parts B and D of the Council’s motion concerning the Roth building to ensure that Palo Alto has a home to celebrate its past and explore its future.

Way back in the 50s when I was in high school in Oak Park, Illinois I heard about the outstanding schools of Palo Alto. About the same time the first steps were occurring which resulted in the City’s developing as the heart of Silicon Valley. These are but two of the areas for which Palo Alto is known nationally and internationally.

Actually the exceptional achievements for which the City is known go back to its early days when the municipal water system was established. In the next few decades many other unique institutions followed such as the first municipally owned community theater, children’s library, and children’s museum.

To capture this exceptionally rich history the museum is planning dynamic, participatory exhibits. But that is not the only goal. The stories will be presented in a way that provides background and inspiration for exploring and managing the next new things.

Since 2007 seven City Councils as well as numerous, dedicated members of the community have made a significant investment of time and funds to provide a home for this endeavor. I implore you to push the project over the finish line.

Sincerely,

Gail Woolley

Dear Mayor Fine & Members of the Palo Alto City Council:

I am writing to you today to urge you to continue supporting the creation of a Palo Alto History Museum in the Roth Building.

I have supported a History Museum in the Roth Building since the concept was first raised and I have financially supported it along with hundreds of others in Palo Alto and beyond. Its location along historic Homer Avenue and adjacent to Heritage Park is perfect for allowing Palo Alto families to celebrate our town’s history. This location also provides a perfect transition from our very busy and congested downtown to our wonderful Professorville historic neighborhood.

The Palo Alto Medical Clinic was a ground-breaking and innovative medical provider and is just a few blocks away from the garage where William Hewlett and David Packard founded their namesake company. This area is ground zero for Silicon Valley and should be used for a Museum to showcase the many innovators who have comprised this phenomenal economic engine from Hewlett & Packard, Dr. Russell V. Lee, & Russell Varian to Mark Zuckerberg, Steve Jobs & Steve Wozniak.

I enthusiastically support the Palo Alto Museum and its use and preservation of the historic Roth Building. Please support this visionary Museum.

Sincerely,

Dear Mayor and Members of the Palo Alto City Council:

I urge you to continue to support the Palo Alto Museum’s use of the Roth Building.

Palo Alto has a long and unique history that is both local and global. Our history, since its beginning has been the center of innovation, creation, and leadership. This history needs to be preserved now and for the future. We need a Palo Alto Museum to showcase our rich unique history. There are hundreds of untold stories that only a museum can preserve for use by future generations.

The Roth Building itself is history of a certain Palo Alto era and deserves to be preserved. What better way than as our own Palo Alto Museum? The building is saved, the museum is institutionalized and Palo Alto’s history, both the past and the future is saved and enhanced.

My friends and I enthusiastically support the Palo Alto Museum and its use and preservation of the Roth Building. Let’s get our Museum opened, even as a first phase project, this year.

With great eagerness!

Enid Pearson, Councilmember (1965-75)
Dear City Council Members,

Here we are in a tough spot not of our making – brought low by a virus and the response may seem to need more fingers than we have to put in the dike. I appreciate each of you for being our fingers in the dike.

I write to ask that you support the whole of our City. It’s past, present, and future. Only by understanding its entire span can we understand who and what we are civically, culturally and politically right now and in future “right nows” to help us make more informed decisions, to better understand our town’s identity and understand our achievements and shortcomings.

To foster excellently Palo Alto’s past, there is no better space than the historic Ross building located perfectly in Heritage Park near Downtown. No other use could fit so perfectly – it is as if the Ross building dreamed up the History Museum to inhabit it. A bit like Cinderella’s glass slipper it fits perfectly – but midnight must not shatter the future of the Museum – instead the City must support it.

Several years ago I decided to launch my own oral history project titled, Six Environmentalists Who Change Palo Alto in the Last Half of the 20th Century. I had never taken oral histories before, so I turned to those who knew how – they happened to be organizers for the History Museum. They became my tutors and supplied written cribs sheets so I could proceed with my project. The result was 12 hours of professionally shot and edited video interviews. I donated copies to what will become the Oral History Library at the Museum, if allowed to be completed, where a space will be set aside for oral histories to be taken.

Think about who may walk in those doors to give those histories - who lives here and at Stanford - it is mind-boggling to think of the invaluable treasure that would be collected, shared and preserved. Workers on lunch hours could wander in to see an exhibit or catch a video lecture or event. And what a destination for families – go to the Museum then play in the Park.

I watched all your hearings on the budget situation and understand the seriousness we are facing – it is daunting. But we cannot do irrevocable harm in this instance by not supporting the Palo Alto History Museum. That would not be putting fingers in the dike - that would be when the dike is breached.

Thank you as ever for your service to our City.

Palo Alto City Council,

I have been the historian for the Palo Alto Historical Association for more than 35 years, helping thousands of people with their questions about Palo Alto history. Many have asked why Palo Alto does not have a history museum of some kind, considering the rich and varied history that has been experienced by their community.

Residents have talked about the need or desire of establishing a local history museum in Palo Alto for years, even decades. At the time the City issue the RFP for the Roth Building, a number of us in the Palo Alto history community banded together to form the Palo Alto History Museum, with the goal of transforming the lovely old (and historic) medical building on Homer Avenue into a museum that could showcase the unique history of this community.

Plumas County in northern California with a population of around 20,000 residents, and only one incorporated city (with less than 2000 residents) has nine museums spread throughout the county. None of the museums are grand, but all are open to visitors and residents showcasing the contributions of the residents of Plumas County, past and present.

The Palo Alto community (including Stanford) needs to find a way to make this history museum a reality, and that effort includes significant support from Council.

Sincerely,

Steven Staiger

Dear Mayor and Members of the Palo Alto City Council:

Perhaps now, more than ever, as we face the current epidemic, we need a sense of historical perspective. Our business was founded in the depths of the Great Depression of the 1930’s, and now, as here we are, eighty-five years later, celebrating our longevity in this town we love, I ask you to have the insight to recognize the need for a dedicated Palo Alto Museum, with eager and generous City support, unencumbered by requirements to share the space with other renters. Please withdraw the RFP to solicit other uses for the Roth Building. The museum’s appropriate willingness to house the city’s archives, to provide educational opportunities to our schools, residents, and visitors, to provide Community space and to design cutting edge displays, provides the perfect uses for this historic building which will glow again under the attention. The opportunity to create a lasting legacy is now. Think big!

I have served on the board of the Palo Alto Historical Association and on the founding board of the Palo Alto Downtown Business and Professional Organization (the BID), currently serve on the advisory board of the Palo Alto Museum, and am owner of Palo Alto’s oldest independent, family-owned bookstore. My family has seen many changes here over the years, and through the interweaving of our lives with literature, historical texts (and events), as well as, academically, with the Stanford community, we have learned to appreciate the value of a careful examination and documentation of those changing times. They slip away so quickly, as does each day as we cope with Covid-19. What did we learn? What will we remember? How will it be preserved?
I have travelled throughout California enjoying history museums of many small and large towns, most with a minute portion of the resources available to us here, and yet the pride they show in sharing their town's history is palpable, admirable, and touching: How can we do less? With our bookstore location downtown, we are asked repeatedly every day by visitors if there is somewhere they can learn more about why our town has become such an internationally renowned hub of technology and world culture: What is the magic that has created this place? Let's explore it together.

Wishing you and all your families good health-

Sincerely and appreciatively yours,

Faith Bell

Dear Mayor and Members of the Palo Alto City Council,

While I serve on the Historical Heritage Commission in Santa Clara County, and on the Historic Resources Board in Palo Alto, I am writing as a private individual and resident of Palo Alto to urge you to continue supporting the Palo Alto Museum's use of the Roth Building. Uncertainty in the museum's partnership with the City at this critical juncture undermines the campaign for the museum.

During the Pandemic my husband and I have been walking the streets of Palo Alto and reading up on our remarkable history, which ranges from the Wild West, agriculture, manufacturing, and the creation of Stanford University, to Rock and Roll and innovation in electronics, medicine, computer science, engineering, big data and defense/security. These stories will inspire newcomers as well as long time residents, and encourage future innovation, pride and investment in our community.

Architect Birge Clark is internationally recognized and the defining architect of Palo Alto. The Roth Building is one of his most important achievements, in addition to having been a key part of the history of the practice of medicine here. The County has already made a significant investment in repairs to the historic red tile roof. The County and thousands of friends and neighbors have already stepped up to support the formation of the Palo Alto Museum.

Now is not the time for the City to abandon the effort. I urge you to reconsider your direction to issue an RFP. The potential market for any other user has likely disappeared in this tragic downtown. The museum already planned a space-sharing arrangement with the Archives and Heritage Park (restroom and Community Room) and this could be extended to a City department. The museum is by far the most appropriate adaptive reuse of this important and historic building.

The City Finance Committee should consider possible funding for the gap to construction (currently estimate at $3.7 m). A good faith and impressive effort has been made on many fronts to raise funds to date. There could be savings as the cost of materials comes down. The City has invested in similar capital projects in City-owned buildings like the Junior Museum and Zoo, Avenidas, and the Art Center and now is the time for the Palo Alto Museum.

Sincerely,

Deborah F. Shepherd

Dear Mayor Fine and Members of the Palo Alto City Council,

I am writing to urge you to continue support for the Palo Alto Museum's use of the Roth Building and to provide additional funding for the building's rehabilitation. In 2019, I joined the Palo Alto Museum Board to make the museum a reality, working with a dedicated group of board members, staff, and volunteers. We all shared a vision to build a world-class museum, showcasing the rich history of our community.

Palo Alto is the epicenter of innovation. Back in 1983, I started my first job as a software engineer in Xerox, Palo Alto, where I was exposed to mouse, bitmap display, windowing system, and the internet, which are still the foundational technologies in our current computers. The origin of the many technologies that are part of our daily life can be traced back to the Palo Alto of that time. It is important for us to preserve these histories for future generations to come. But beyond the technological advancements, citizens and visitors in the Palo Alto Museum will witness the pioneer spirit and creativity, the real-life stories born from our community, that inspired many to stretch even further and envision ideas that would change the world.

I understand we are in a very challenging time right now. At a time like this, it is even more important to examine and honor our past to determine how we will invest in our future. Having a hands-on visual center that explains the history, right in the center of town, will provide an inspiring touchstone for our community youth and citizens, as well as for visitors at large.

I write in support of the Palo Alto History Museum.

Please reverse your direction to issue a new RFP.

Please fund the gap of funds for construction so that the Palo Alto History Museum may open in the historic Roth Building.

As a resident of Palo Alto, as a retired teacher in the Palo Alto Unified School District, and as a donor to the museum, I feel it will be an enormous asset to our community, students of local history in particular, to have a place where the long and interesting history of Palo Alto can be seen and absorbed. I have lived here since 1953, and the changes that have occurred over that time period have been extraordinary, and much important growth occurred before that time. Residents and visitors would benefit from knowing how all those changes occurred.

‘Our community needs this museum. I urge you to give it your full support.

Dear Mayor and Members of the Palo Alto City Council:

I am writing to you today to urge you to strengthen your support for the Palo Alto Museum's use of the Roth Building. Thirty-five years ago, we used to bring our children to see doctors at the Roth Building, and we'd visit the Arnautoff murals from the Depression era as a part of Palo Alto's history. The Birge Clark buildings define Palo Alto's Spanish heritage style and are an important part of our local legacy.

As residents of over 40 years, it seems to us more than appropriate for our truly unique city that serves as a pivot in a moment of history to be showcased in this particular building. Not just are we the birthplace of Silicon Valley, the home of Shockley Labs and the HP garage, but the place where innovation in multiple disciplines (IDEO, Theatreworks, Waymo, etc.) says there is something different here. Palo Alto has changed the world not only with the silicon chip but with its culture of trying things out from ground level and recognizing that innovation is an essential building block in modern society.

In particular, the Museum offers an opportunity to look at this phenomenon in an historic context telling the stories of real people of different backgrounds, individuals and groups of people often unknown, who contributed in some way to this world change. When we came to Palo Alto in 1977 to attend the Stanford Business School, we were discouraged from looking at houses north of Oregon Expressway since I was Chinese. Redlining was the unofficial policy. And yet even as policies changed, Asians and other immigrants were and continue to be an integral part of building Palo Alto and California. That's why the many contributions of people who built Palo Alto but may not have even lived here, should be part of our story context. The fact that this proposed Museum will include references to this and other contributors showcases the richness of our history. In addition, the proximity of the Roth building to the Museum of American Heritage, Professorville and the downtown area helps also to build a concentration of the historic district, which with good signage, creates an attractive draw.

As a supporter and ex-Director and Board member of various local non-profits, I urge you to join our friends and neighbors in supporting our community's sense of self through the Palo Alto Museum in this location.

Sincerely,

Raehua Pan

Dear City Council Members,

I'm writing to give my whole-hearted support to the Palo Alto History Museum. The outreach from the Museum developers made me aware just how rich and multi-faceted and intriguing Palo Alto's history is -- its individuals, its communities, its businesses, its streets and architecture and public events. People want to know about their hometowns and they want their kids to know, and they're excited to learn how places grow. And in PA's case, newcomers and visitors will want to know as well. In this, of all times, we should not throw away our access either to a source of knowledge or to the connections that give the city its strength.

The city should go the whole nine yards and make it happen. I didn't like the movie, but this is without doubt a case of "if you build it, they will come."

I lived in PA for years and years but am not currently resident there. I still have family there, however, and hope to return before long. Of course, PA's City Council represents PA residents, but I will just add that while the Museum is of critical importance to the community, its value would reach far beyond PA itself.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Mayor and Members of the Palo Alto City Council:

I support the Palo Alto Museum’s use of the Roth Building and I hope you continue to advocate for this vital resource.

Palo Alto has a unique place in history from its origins as a college-town to its impacts on creating an entire new industry that has influenced the global economy. I support the Museum because it is important to capture our rich history for current and future generations. The Roth Building is a perfect use for this vibrant museum, with history painted on its walls and its convenient location to Heritage park and the Museum of American Heritage. With the continued loss in family activities (bowling alleys, miniature golf courses, toy stores, etc.), the Palo Alto Museum is a needed community gathering place that will provide not only educational but also entertainment value.

As a fourth generation Palo Altan living in the same house my great-grandparents owned, I have a special attachment to the town and its legacy. My great-grandfather worked for Leland Stanford and lived at Cedro Cottage (my great-grandparents even celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary there in 1923) and eventually settled in what is now Downtown North. My grandfather was a local businessman, operating several markets within the downtown area. My mother was an unofficial local historian, who enjoyed giving tours throughout the area to friends, family and out-of-town guests, while sharing stories of Palo Alto then and now. It is important to capture those types of stories and preserve the artifacts of Palo Alto’s evolving history in a dedicated location, for which the Roth Building is well-suited.

I urge you to join me and thousands of friends and neighbors in supporting our community’s advancement, goodwill, culture, and pride through the Palo Alto Museum.

RE: Letter of Support for the Palo Alto History Museum

To the Honorable Members of the Palo Alto City Council:

I am writing to you today in support of the Palo Alto History Museum and the need to keep the future museum housed in the historic Roth Building.

George Santayana, a Spanish-American philosopher, may be most well-known for his often-repeated quote, “Those who do not remember the past are condemned to repeat it.” However, another quote from Santayana is more apt for this moment, “A country without a memory is a country of madmen.” So, too, must cities without a memory.

My name is Greer Stone. I teach history at Gunn High School, vice-chair the Santa Clara County Human Rights Commission, and chair the Palo Alto Midtown Residents Association, but my advocacy in this letter is strictly my own and does not necessarily reflect the opinions of the aforementioned organizations. However, my belief in the importance of the Palo Alto History Museum is informed, in part, due to my work in those various roles.

All communities have a history but a history without a storyteller is like a bird without wings. Palo Alto’s rich history deserves a building to house our story in which is equally steeped in the past. As a history teacher in Palo Alto, I lament the lack of historical education provided to our city’s youth regarding our city’s history. This is no critique of our school district, but rather the limitations on the State’s history curriculum. For students to learn our city’s history, they must be encouraged to independently study it. The best way to encourage this education is to have an engaging, exciting, and beautiful history museum that the city supports and celebrates.

This museum will be a gift for us all, including future generations of Palo Altans. Our history, both the good and the bad, must be seen and understood. This museum will ensure our city’s story is told and that is a gift worth giving to our future.

Thank you,

Greer Stone
To the Mayor and Members of the Palo Alto City Council:

This letter is to offer thoughts and reminders in the hope that the Council will continue its support of both a local history museum and its housing in the Roth building.

I am currently contracted to write a book of vignettes on significant people and events in Palo Alto history to be put together in a book and a documentary film, all proceeds to support the museum (my bio at wynwachhorst.com).

Nearly every town in America has a local history project, a great many have a local history publication, and very often a local history museum. At least 46 towns in California list a local history museum, while many more house a local history display without terming it a museum. Every community has a story, but Palo Alto’s, as you know, is more significant than most. In a sentence: Palo Altans have historically transformed the fabric of modern life.

Cyril Elwell, an early Palo Alto pioneer in wireless telegraphy, once noted that what Edison’s Menlo Park, New Jersey, was to sound and light in the nineteenth century, Palo Alto was to electronics in the twentieth. Palo Alto’s role as the birthplace of Silicon Valley began decades before Steve Jobs moved to Waverly Street, before the development of William Shockley’s transistor on San Antonio Road or Robert Noyce’s integrated circuit on East Charleston, even before Bill Hewlett and Dave Packard’s Addison Avenue garage. It dates from 1912, when Lee de Forest, developed the first practicable radio tube in a small house on Emerson Street and launched the electronic age. In the first half of the 20th century, manufactures at Federal Telegraph put Palo Alto at the electronic center of the world, while MacKay Radio launched communication across the Pacific.

But Palo Alto’s extraordinary history extends well beyond electronics. With a prehistory of exploration and settlement dating from the 18th century, a symbiotic connection to Stanford, and a remarkably long list of notable musicians, artists, writers, scientists, inventors, entrepreneurs, politicians, actors, and athletes, many of them world renown,* Palo Alto cries out for a state-of-the-art museum of local history.
A local history museum is to the community what a scrapbook or photo album is to the family. History, individual or communal, is a sense of self through time, the continuity that makes us who we are, a source of meaning and identity. The present is all process. We are the sum of our memories. A community is defined by its past.

Having the museum in the Roth building, itself an historic landmark in the center of town, seems ideal. While the building itself warrants restoration, the museum has already raised much of that cost, conditional on occupying at least part of the building. Nor is the cost excessive, given the option of far more expensive projects, many of which simply enrich individuals while deteriorating our quality of life.

There is wide support in the community for both the museum and its locus in the colorfully historic Roth building. My hope is that the Council will support the project, recognizing the importance of exhibiting Palo Alto’s pivotal and kaleidoscopic past in a setting not only engaging and educational, but conspicuously appropriate as well.

Sincerely,

(signed original being mailed)

Wyn Wachhorst

*Omitting Stanford faculty, a far from complete list of prominent people would still include well over 100 names: At least 13 scientists and inventors, 17 writers, 23 business leaders and entrepreneurs, 8 politicians and civil servants, 12 musicians, 14 actors, 9 artists and designers, and 26 athletes.

Dear Mayor Fine and Council Members Cormack, DuBois, Filseth, Kniss, Kou, and Tanaka,

I ask you to count me among the donors and supporters of the Palo Alto History Museum who advocate a second life for the City-owned Roth Building as the home of the future Museum.

— Please reverse the March 2 directive to Staff to move forward with options for an RFP.
— Please weigh the benefits of City capital funding to accelerate rehabilitation of the Roth Building and prevent further deterioration by neglect of this valuable architectural asset.

Palo Alto is singular in many ways, among them the fact that we have no museum to illustrate the stories that give our city global significance beyond its size. My husband and I are among the community supporters pledged to opening a museum that will spotlight the people and the forward-looking energy that has always distinguished Palo Alto. Though we are retired now, our own histories as students and employees (Stanford, HP, Apple) span a fascinating period of invention and growth. My family took root here in 1895, early in the town’s development. I am a former teacher of young children and a civic volunteer, recently retired from the boards of the Palo Alto Historical Association, which manages the City-owned Guy Miller Archives, and the Palo Alto History Museum. For over a decade it has been my privilege to work with people committed to bringing the archives and a participatory museum to the Roth Building.

The pandemic of 2020 has delivered unforeseen challenges that unsettle your management of civic assets and opportunities. I don’t envy the Council’s budgetary choices. Still, I am convinced that a museum illuminating a distinctive past will strengthen community identity among today’s diverse Palo Altans and inspire young people to imagine futures of their own.

The City, the Roth Building, and the Museum have come a long way together. I think of our civic forbears who conceived and built unique educational and cultural resources that serve us today. I urge you to consider the lasting value to the City of a modern museum in a historic building.

Please continue substantive City support for keeping the future Museum in the Roth Building.

With thanks for your thoughtful attention.

Sincerely,

Dear Mayor and Members of the Palo Alto City Council,

I am writing to you today to urge you to continue supporting the Palo Alto Museum’s use of the Roth Building.

For three generations, my family has attended Addison, Jordan (Greene) and Paly. When I learned about the plans for Palo Alto Museum, I was ecstatic... what a great idea to preserve stories of Palo Alto citizens including my own family’s. We have so many amazing entrepreneurs, artists, inventors but no museum to tell their stories. What better place than the historic Roth building by eminent local architect Birge Clark, where founder Dr. Lee started the Palo Alto Medical Foundation and where I accompanied my mother to the Radiology department to overcome cancer.

A few years ago I took over my mom’s role as family archivist and inherited her countless photos of the May Fete parade, the Palo Alto Duck Pond, photos downtown when living across from the City of Paris Cleaners and down the street from Paddleford. I heard stories of her visit with Elizabeth Gamble as a young Chinese girl, decorating the Girl Scout House for a dance, and the hayrides down Sandhill Road. These stories are just as relevant to the history of Palo Alto as the story of my grandfather in 1905 overcoming racial barriers to own the City Cafe, the first legal Chinese-run restaurant in Palo Alto on University Avenue. I request that the City Council fully support the development of the Palo Alto History Museum in the historically significant Roth Building to share these precious snapshots of life in Palo Alto’s history, as well as the groundbreaking stories, which collectively make Palo Alto such an interesting place to live.

I envision the Palo Alto History Museum as a community hub that will showcase Palo Alto from its inception as a university town to the powerhouse of Silicon Valley. It will help to anchor us in our sense of who we are. I ask for your help to support the History Museum Board’s vision on all of our behalf to become a unique testament to our evolution.

I enthusiastically support the Palo Alto Museum and its use and preservation of the historic Roth Building. I urge you to join me and thousands of friends and neighbors in supporting our community’s advancement, goodwill, culture, and pride through the Palo Alto Museum.

Dear Mayor Fine, Vice Mayor DuBois, and Councilmembers Cormack, Filseth, Kniss, Kou and Tanaka:

I support the establishment of the Palo Alto History Museum in the historic Roth Building. Please reinstate the lease option agreement and make a place in the city’s budget for the funds necessary to start the rehabilitation of the Roth Building.

Having a local, accessible history museum would add to the richness that is Palo Alto. Knowing the past of a place helps to understand how the place got to where it is today and provides a grounding which allows thoughtful movement towards tomorrow. Palo Alto needs a place where all residents can see the history of the city and see themselves both in that history and as part of creating a desirable future for the city.

In my almost 32 years here, my involvement with PTAs in Palo Alto, the Girl Scouts of Palo Alto, the Junior League of Palo Alto-Midpeninsula, the YWCA of the Mid-Peninsula Donor Advised Fund, Abilities United and other non-profits has made me keenly aware of the depth of caring in the community. Having a museum that shares that with the community and the world is an undeniably good thing.

The city has had many partnerships (Avenidas, the Junior Museum and Zoo and the Art Center, for example) over the years that serve the residents so well. The PAHM would be a fine addition to the list, adding a new thread to the beautiful tapestry that is Palo Alto.

The many hundreds of donors and supporters of the PAHM have shown by their actions that Palo Alto should have a museum. Please work with them to complete the reality and fund the shortfall that would bring the Museum in the historic Roth Building to fruition. Having the Palo Alto History Museum will allow us all to be our best selves.

Thank you for your consideration,

Marcie Brown

Dear Mayor Fine and Council Members:

I urge Council to reverse their previous decision to offer a new RFP for the Roth Building. Please vote to supply the necessary funds to bring that historic building up to code and open it as the Palo Alto History Museum. That is in the City’s interest.

As a longtime resident, I regret that I cannot take visitors, or my grandchildren, to a place where they can learn about the rich history of Palo Alto.

As founder of AAUW Tech Trek STEM Camps for Girls, I assure you that young people are interested in history. In 22 years, we have hosted, on college campuses, 17,000 rising 8th grade young women on full scholarships. A portion of the program is instruction about the history of women in math and science. It ignites a spark of excitement when they learn that significant discoveries have been made by women since at least 1900 BCE. The girls of Palo Alto should have one destination where they can be inspired by the accomplishments of Palo Alto’s women.

Throughout our city's history, many women and men have made important contributions. With additional funding from the City, and the already committed funds from private donors, we will provide a place where all our students and citizens can learn those stories.

Thank you.

Dear Mayor and Council Members,

I am writing to you today to encourage you to support a museum dedicated to Palo Alto history. And for their residency in the city owned Roth Building. A city that is as important as Palo Alto should have a museum that showcases its important history and contributions to not just the Bay Area but the world at large.

In the immediate Bay Area there are over 20 city museums. Each one, either focused on, or entirely dedicated to, the history and evolution of the city and surrounding area they represent. And while not disparaging any other city, it would be difficult to find a city with a richer, more significant, history than that of Palo Alto.

A city history museum will provide numerous benefits to the city. It will be a destination for every family living in the immediate area, an outing for school groups of all ages, and a must visit location for visitors to our community. But in addition to being a destination, it also provides a concise organization responsible for the preservation, and display, of community historic documents, photographs, and artifacts.

And I consider the historic Roth Building as an excellent match for a museum. Its architectural style is quite compatible with the appearance of a museum, and it has a perfect location to attract downtown visitors. In my opinion, using that property for just a government office, or leasing it out to a commercial business is not the optimal use of this valuable asset of the city.

I urge you to find a solution that will result in the Palo Alto Museum being able to reside in the Roth Building.

Sincerely,

Jim Wall

Dear Mayor Fine, Vice Mayor du Bois and Council,

I am writing in support of the Palo Alto History Museum. As an artist and retired teacher in the PAUSD, I feel it is imperative we have an appropriate venue to share and showcase the stories of this city. My late husband, Greg Brown, felt strongly that our "hometown" have a special place where generations might come to appreciate our unique history. He planned to paint a mural celebrating Palo Alto's Culture at the site.

The remodeled Art Center and the Junior Museum serve to entertain and educate both our citizens and visitors alike. It is time for the Palo Alto History Museum to take its rightful place beside them.

Thank you,
Julie Brown
