

PALO ALTO Medical Reserve Corps

Get Involved!

Palo Alto MRC is a local unit (#2581) of the National Medical Reserve Corps program that is in the process of building their capabilities to support our community during times of great need. MRC volunteers are part of an organized and trained team that is ready to bolster local emergency planning and response capabilities.

Needed: We need and can use everyone. From retired medical personnel to nonmedical volunteers interested in assisting their community in times of great need. We provide training and would love to have you join our team.

What Would I Do As A Volunteer?

The specific role that you will play and activities in which you will participate will depend on your background, interests and skills. A few examples are:

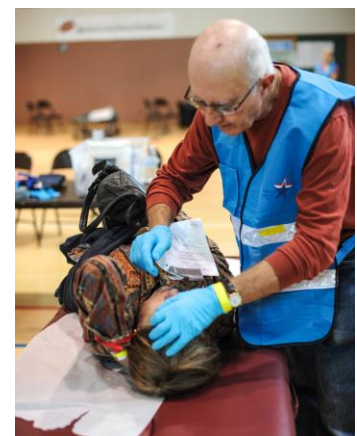

- Delivering basic first aid
- Registering victims at a first aid station
- Sitting with an anxious relative of a victim
- Assisting with translations
- Playing with and comforting children of treatment victims

MRC volunteers attend drills to practice our roles as medical responders, to share inputs and skills, and to be prepared for that eventual large scale emergency.

MRC volunteers attend trainings in order to improve their skills, knowledge and abilities. See upcoming training opportunities on the back of this flyer.
