Mr. Villanueva-Castano, Allcove Representative specified that he is the Support Education Employment Specialist with Allcove in the City of San Jose and in the City.

Steve Eckert, Allcove Representative disclosed that he is the CEO of Alum Rock Counseling Center.

Mr. Adelsheim disclosed that the City is facing a mental health crisis among its teens and it is very important to have early mental health support. To encourage more mental health support for teens outside of school, there was a collaboration among several entities to start two Allcove sites. The core services provided at the Allcove sites included mental health, physical health, supported education and employment, substance use support, peer support, and social support. One of the key aspects of the Allcove model was the youth voice and services and supports that were guided by young people.

Ms. Xu shared that Allcove practices inclusivity. The name is meant to be inclusive as well as an understanding of having autonomy in service and support.

Ms. Rao noted that youth struggle with hardships but rarely talk about them. To encourage youth to reach out and engage in discussions, Allcove provided three key moments. At the entrance and check-in, youth are greeted in an accepting way, services are tailored to each youth to provide an understanding offering and then youth are guided and connected with services. YAG continued to work with Allcove to ensure that there was transparency as well as the right services available to youth.

Ms. Peng articulated that the Allcove space will be a non-clinical space with warm tones and have a variety of seating areas and textures.

Ms. Aspiras reported that the discussion around creating such a space for youth started in 2015 with a Feasibility Study that looked at Allcove sites. In 2017, County General Funds were invested in the implementation and a contract with Stanford University was formed to help with technical assistance. In 2017, the Mental Health Services Act Stakeholder Leadership Committee approved the project. In 2019, Allcove became the official name and the Board of Supervisors approved the leases of the sites located in Palo Alto as well as the City of San Jose. In 2020, a virtual youth wellness support program was implemented online to help with the Coronavirus (COVID-19) Pandemic. Construction is to be completed for the Palo Alto site in April 2021 with a site activation on May 14, 2021. The lead agency was the Santa Clara County Behavioral Health Services Department. The YAG provided input on Staff hiring as well as peer supportive services. The providers and subject matter experts included Alum Rock Counseling Center, Santa Clara County Behavioral Health Services Department, Stanford Center for Youth Mental Health and Wellbeing, and Valley Medical Center. The City site is located at 2741 Middlefield Road. She briefly described the layout of the site.

Ms. Rao explained that the YAG ensures that there is a youth voice at the core of all Allcove touchpoints and that each center has its own youth advisory group. The engagement of the YAG within the center builds community and trust among youth.

Ms. Peng shared that the mission of Allcove YAG was to empower young people to become the leading voice in redefining mental wellness, reducing stigma, and increasing access to mental health support. The vision was to revolutionize mental wellness for young people and the core values were youth voice, accessibility, and mental wellness.

Ms. Soto highlighted the principles of youth participation which included youth involvement, youth expertise, youth direction, learning, leadership, collaboration, and shared decision making.

Ms. Peng noted that youth advisors share similar living experiences and situations as other youth. For this reason, members can empathize and support other youth with their mental health and build empowerment.
Ms. Xu emphasized that youth inclusion made sure that Allcove effectively responds to the needs of young people. YAG continued to work with marketing Staff to ensure as many youths as possible become aware of Allcove and its services.

Mr. Villanueva-Castano explained the supported education and employment service cycle of change model. The model included six stages that Staff focused on. Precontemplation, contemplation, preparation, action, maintenance, and learning experiences. When youth seek out services from Allcove, Staff discovers what stage they are in and then works with the youth to move them forward to the next stages. Education pathways provided at Allcove included academic advocacy support, academic skill-building support, academic placement support, and community connections. Employment pathways included skill-building, job seeking, and communication connections to local workforce development agencies, employment skill-building organizations, and connections to certificate/union-based programs. Workshops and training will also be offered to help.

Mr. Eckert shared that Alum Counseling Center has been in business for 46-years and is a multi-service agency that provided 13 programs. Allcove’s peer support specialists would serve the population of youth from age 12 to 25. Alum Counseling Center will provide non-clinical services at Allcove and lead and coordinate the Community Consortium. The Community Consortiums met quarterly and the 12 members included Elected Officials, community college representatives, and other service providers.

Rebecca Eisenberg expressed excitement about the Allcove Program and she urged the Council to financially assist and support the program.

Council Member Tanaka asked how students get involved.

Ms. Soto mentioned that the application process has started for YAG and that is how youth can become involved. Also, other opportunities were available if youth are interested.

Council Member Tanaka requested if the YAG is only available for high school students.

Ms. Soto answered that the YAG was for youth ages 16 to 25. Allcove will provide services for youth starting at age 12.
